

SILVIA FLUCH

Studied biology (University of Graz and Vienna, AT; Focus - Plant Genetics). From 1996 scientific project assistant at the AIT (Austrian Institute of Technology GmbH). In the following years further development as group leader, senior scientist, tasked with the establishment of strategic interdisciplinary topics at the intersection of biology and technology (bioinformatics, database integration in forest genetics). Executive master's program 'Organizational Development' at iff (University Klagenfurt. AT).

March 2015 Joined ecoduna produktion GmbH; as of December 2015 in the management of ecoduna produktion GmbH and its successor to eparella GmbH and member of the executive board of ecoduna AG. As COO responsible for research & development and the translation of scientific knowledge of biotechnology and algae research into application-relevant measures in industrial algae production. Organizational development activities from demonstration plant to pre-industrial and industrial pilot microalgae production as well as product development.